ULowell's budget crisis gets national College Press Service attention

(CPS) — Angered by the state legislature's decision not to give $38.5 million in extra funds to education, about 1,000 University of Utah students walked out of class Sept. 30.

And in Massachusetts, a group of college presidents said they would defy Gov. Michael Dukakis's Sept. 27 order to Massachusetts' 29 state colleges to lay off 700 people to help the state offset a $340 million budget shortfall.

Dukakis had forced campuses to make drastic cuts earlier in 1989, too.

"This is not something that I will do in the middle of a year where we've already cut $8 million," said Joseph Duffey, chancellor at UMass-Amherst, which complied with the earlier round of cuts.

"There's no way we can do it and be a university when it's over," said William T. Hogan, president of the University of Lowell, which Dukakis ordered to lay off 56 people to help save $2.5 million. "I won't do it."

In Utah, it was students who revolted.

"We want the legislature to know it's not just student government members that are angry," said government member Wendi Brown. "It's the whole student population."

Students returned to campus Sept. 25 to find that legislators had decided earlier in the month to return the "extra" money to taxpayers rather than invest it in education. Nearly

Interview: Paul Tsongas on the budget

By Bob Manning

In your opinion, why is higher education being treated the way it is right now, by the Dukakis administration. Or do you think it goes beyond the administration?

Well, I think you - I mean to the extent one focuses one's attention on the administration; I think you're making a fatal error, because ultimately the issue is one of resources. And that can only be voted on by the legislature. And so you have that and the legislature is responding to what it perceives to be an anti-tax sentiment. And unfortunately, you have a business community which is no better, which has been basically acquiescent to the financial plight imposed upon the system. It is very interesting because in most other states the business community is leading the charge for a commitment to education and making education a priority; and in this state for some bizarre reason, the leadership is not there. If I asked you to name me a well-known CEO of a high-tech company pushes out front for education, you couldn't name anybody. Whereas, in other states some of the key people - I use David Carnes of Xerox - for people to focus on the administration to the exclusion of everybody else is a major strategic error.

Even though I would tend to agree... but in the latest round of cuts that have to be initiated by the administration 30% of the layoffs are to come from public higher education, while we only make up 6% of the budget.

Well, we make up 6% of the budget; we make up 20% of the personnel

I know of no corporation that, when it has to downsize, cuts everything X percent.

Ultimately, it comes down to a matter of resources. One can focus one's attention on. How do you get out of this mess. It comes down to is the legislature

R.E.A.L.M. Fall leadership weekend was a learning experience

by Paula Haines

On Friday the 13th, a busload of students left ULowell to go to a camp in the woods, near a lake. The weekend turned out to be much more fun than a Jason movie, however, as the participants in the leadership weekend sponsored by R.E.A.L.M. took Sargent Camp.

The camp, located in Peterborough, N.H., owned and operated by Boston University, offers leadership training and adventure courses for school groups and executive groups, and also serves as an environmental learning center. The students were put up in the Robert Frost House, one of several cabins in the camp. Sargent Camp is surrounded by trees, and the woods contain various rope courses and problem-solving stations, as well as several cross-country skiing trails.

In this setting, the participants learned leadership styles and skills and were given an opportunity to practice them in a series of group activities. These included "The Wall" — which, while a real challenge, was overcome by planning, organization, and teamwork. The group worked together to get each person up and over a 12-foot wall, using nothing but their bodies, and the skills that they had acquired.

Members of R.E.A.L.M. made presentations to the group on topics such as Program Planning, Goal Setting, and Managing Effective Meetings, some of which were accompanied by role playing and board games. Mary Connelly, Director of Student Activities, was a participant as well as the leader of the group, presenting the students with a segment on University Resources, and leading discussions about leadership experiences.

The 19 student participants represented various clubs and organizations, including R.E.A.L.M., The Connector, B.S.U., R.H.A., L.A.S.A., A.P.I.C.S., Cultural Pluralists, and the Class of 1993. The weekend proved to be highly successful, and everyone agreed that they had learned something valuable to bring back to ULowell.

It's not getting the priority I think it deserves; not only higher education, but K-12.

But what we're talking about is:

after the cut, how do you Why have the cut at all? That's a resource issue.

I think a lot of people feel that

APICS

American Production and Inventory Control Society presents Mr. Phil Hubis.

Mr. Hubis will be lecturing on manufacturing and the importance of having close ties to all other facets of business, including Information Systems.

All students are welcome to attend.

Where: Multi-purpose room - basement of library.

When: Wednesday, October 25, 1989 3:30 p.m.

International Relations Club

The International Relations Club (IRC) will have its third meeting of the year today, at 2:30 p.m. in room 327 of the South Campus media center. We will be doing lots of things.

*holding the raffle *signing up for the U.N. trip *passing out the new T-shirts *starting the crisis game. All members are urged to come, and all prospective members are welcomed to attend.

The Alpine Club

The Alpine Club will be teaching all new members how to rock climb this Sunday, October 22. Anyone may attend, but spaces are limited. Sign-up with Patty at 256-4179, after 7 p.m., or at 934-2638, during the day.

All students interested in law school

The Pre-Law Society will be holding a meeting on Monday, October 23, at 4:30 in Olsen 310. During this meeting we will be holding elections for the 1989-90 school year. Any student interested in becoming an officer please prepare a brief election speech.

Also to be discussed at this meeting will be the trip to the Law School Forum on Friday, October 27th. This forum is the pinnacle of the society's activities and is mandatory for any student with an interest in attending law school. There is a plethora of knowledge to be obtained at the forum which is essential to the application process.

Remember, there is no specific undergraduate major required for law school, so all are welcome.

The Spanish Club

The Spanish Club will be hosting a coffee hour on Wednesday the 25th of October. The meeting is open to all students but we especially invite language majors. The club will be inviting new members. We'll be discussing upcoming events and elections.

Hang Gliding Club

The U Lowell Hang Gliding Club had an enjoyable time in Claremont, N.H. last weekend. The new members learned about the basics of hang gliding and had an awesome time camping (has anyone managed to grab their ear with their arm around their head yet?).

The hang gliding club will be making another trip this weekend (October 20 - October 22). All students of the university are invited to attend; just drop a note in the club's mailbox, #116 at the north S.I.C. If you come to Claremont with us, you'll have a chance to meet many exciting people and watch hang gliders soar off into the sky. Transportation will be provided.

RELIGION

Protestant Worship Service

Protestant worship services are held on Sunday evenings at 6:00 p.m. in Fox Hall, room 301. You are invited to attend! Because food pantries in the area are in great need of food, you are asked to please bring an item of nonperishable food that will be given to those in need. For further information or for conversation, please call me at 454-0683 or stop by my office in Fox, room 608B. Office hours are Mondays from 1:30 - 3:00 p.m. —The Rev. ## GENERAL

TELECONFERENCE TO EXPLORE BIBLICAL FUNDAMENTALISM

"Fundamentally Speaking: Catholic Views on Campus" is the title of a two part satellite conference that will be hosted by the Catholic Center on Thursday evening October 26th and Thursday evening November 2nd from 9:00pm to 10:30pm in READ Hall on the West Campus. The purpose of a teleconference is to provide viewers with the opportunity to interact with the presenters and with other viewers all over the country via telephone during the broadcast itself.

The first program on October 26th is entitled: "Which Came First - the Bible or the Church" and will explore one of the basic differences that exist among Christian Churches today: Is the Bible to be taken literally as a factual history and a book of prescriptions about life or is it a book about faith that needs to be read in the context of Christian tradition and with modern tools of exegesis? The second conference on November 2nd entitled: "Forward to the Basics" will present a Catholic response to Biblical Fundamentalism.

This two-part series will be an excellent opportunity to hear both sides of an important issue discussed with seriousness and respect for varying opinions. For Catholics and Protestants, believers and searchers and everything in between, this teleconference will be an extraordinary event.

In order to plan for refreshments, we are asking that if you plan to attend that you RSVP to the Catholic Center sometime before October 26th. On that night, we'll plan to gather at 8:30pm in order to become more conversant with that issues that will be discussed. For more information, please contact Father Paul at the Center at 454-0151.

AL-ANON ON CAMPUS

Al-Anon is a support group for people who are dealing with the alcoholism of a family member or a friend. Each week the ULowell Al-Anon Group meets in Fox 604 on Tuesday evenings from 7:30pm to 9:00pm. The group is open to all. For more information, please contact Sr. Gail at the Catholic Center 454-0151.

Attention all students, faculty and staff

The North and South Campus Bookstores will begin the return of their remaining textbooks to the publishers on Wednesday, October 25.

Please make all your purchases prior to this date.

Shopping Trip

A bus trip to the shopping outlets in Kittery, Maine is being planned for Saturday, November 4. A sign-up sheet and further details are available in the Adult-Learner Drop-In Center, room 335 of the Mary McGauvran Student Center, South Campus. All students, faculty, and family members are welcome. This activity is sponsored by Encore Club, the ULowell organization for adult learners.

Contest

Encore Club is sponsoring a Rename the Second Chance Program contest. This is the perfect opportunity to make use of your creativity and come up with a more appropriate name for the adult learner program. Your entry should include your name, home phone and address, and your school box #. Entries may be brought to the Adult Learner Drop-In Center, room 335 of the Mary McGauvran Student Center on South Campus, or to box 47 of South Campus SIC. The winner will receive a gift certificate. Deadline for entries is November 15.

Open House for Adult Learners

An Open Horrible House will be held on Thursday, October 26 in Room 334 of the Mary McGauvran Student Center on South Campus from 10:00 to 1:00. Halloween refreshments will be served. The Open House is a wonderful opportunity to connect with other adult students. Take time out of your busy schedule to make some new friends. Peer counselors and peer mentors will be available to discuss upcoming pre-registration procedures. All are welcome.

This event is sponsored by Encore Club, the ULowell organization for adult learners.

Announcement:

Anyone interested in going to New York City? The Advertising for Women of New York invite students, both men and women, to participate in an exciting, informative weekend in New York City at the 1989 College Career Conference. Need more information, contact the Marketing Club by Monday, 10/23/89, Box #188, or Fox 510.

Law School Forum!!!!

The Pre-Law Society is sponsoring a trip, Friday October 27, to the Law School Forum at the Hynes Auditorium. The forum consists of representatives from all American Bar Association (A.B.A.) approved law schools who are prepared to answer questions about admission requirements, and distribute application brochures.

Also at the forum, are presentations which offer advice to potential applicants as to application technique, and choosing the law school which best suits each individual's particular needs.

This forum is a must for any student with an interest in attending law school. There is no specific undergraduate major required to attend so everyone is welcome to attend.

There will be a bus leaving from Olsen Friday October 27, promptly at 9:00 a.m. We encourage all interested parties to meet in Olsen 229 at 8:45 a.m. for a brief rundown of the day's events.

Women's Center

The women's Center will meet Monday, October 23rd in Room 334 SUB at 11 a.m. We will be discussing current projects and future plans. Everyone is welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Advisor wanted

The freshman class is looking for an advisor. If any faculty or staff is interested, contact Karen at box #5628.

Respect Life Group forming

Are you interested in talking with other interested students about issues that affect life today? Do you believe in the right to life of all people? If you are, there is going to be a meeting to explore the possibility of establishing a "Respect Life" committee at ULowell. The first meeting will take place at the Catholic Center (corner of VFW Highway and Mt. Hope Street) on Tuesday evening, November 7th beginning at 7:00 p.m. For more information, please contact Yvonne Guzley, box 6226.

Sponsoring An International Dinner

The University Bible Fellowship is sponsoring an international dinner on Saturday, October 28 at 6:30 p.m. We invite all international students who would like to come to bring a dish native to their country and join us. It will be held at Collinsville Bible Church in Dracut. For more information, call Dan and Elizabeth Rolfe at 957-1127 or Dan Airey at Box 5N.

1200 What?

by Judith A. Nelson

There are about 1200 undeclared Liberal Arts majors at the University of Lowell. Until recently Professor Luter of the History Department was the only faculty member advising these students.

Well, Professor Luter gave up his position as sole advisor of undeclared Liberal Arts majors. Obviously the job of advising some 1200 students is not a job for one person. Dean Blewett, Co-Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has been busy trying to figure out how best to help these students.

Approximately 300 of these 1200 students must declare a major during the next advising period; once you have 60 credits you must declare a major. The Professors from the various Liberal Arts departments will find this advising period more difficult as the 1200 students are being divided among them.

CLASS, (Center for Academic Learning Support System, formerly the Freshmen Center), will be assisting in advising the students. The center will have peer advisors to go over those dreaded core requirements that all of us will fulfill before we graduate. From CLASS the students will be referred to the Counseling and Career Development Center.

The Counseling and Career Development Center is located on the third floor of the Mary McGauvran Student Union Building on South Campus. CLASS has locations on both North and South Campus; third floor Southwick and the basement of McGauvran. Peer counselors are available at the Counseling and Career Development Center to help use the Discover computer. The computer has nine modules and some can aid in choosing a major and career path.

Students may also meet with counselors one on one to discuss their plans. There are eleven counselors available at the Counseling Center and they are there for us! We can make appointments to talk with a counselor about career plans, personal problems, or anything else that concerns us. I should point out that these counseling services are free!

There are many resources available to us at the University and sometimes we may forget that they are here. It can take a situation like having 1200 undeclared Liberal Arts majors who need advising to remind us of these resources, but they are available.

The teachers who are advising us should also be aware of these resources and where they can refer students if need be. I'm sure they would welcome any help when it comes to advising.

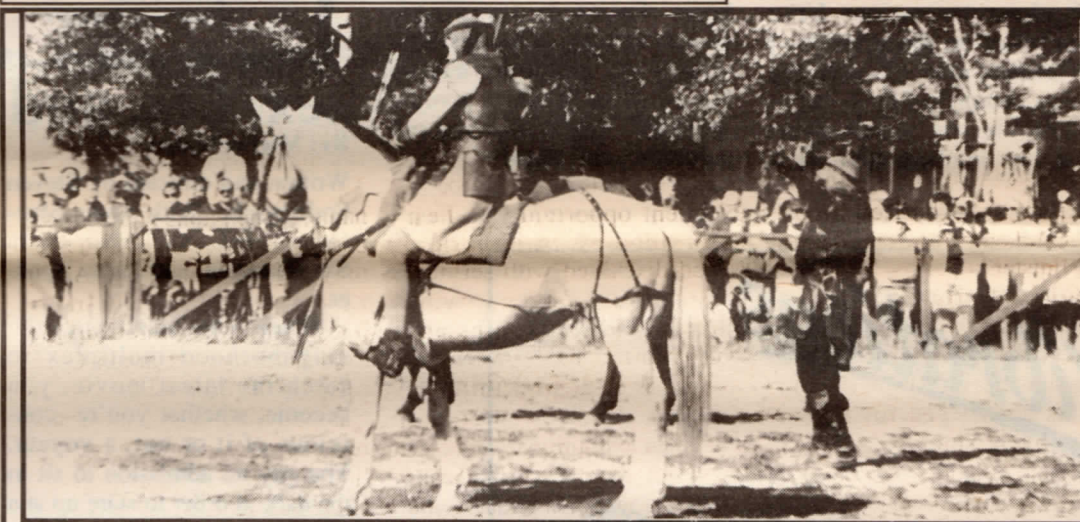

So if you need a little advice or guidance make sure you get it. Go to your advisor, visit one of the CLASS locations, or check out the Counseling and Career Development Center. Don't wait until things get too difficult to handle.

higher education and K-12 are taking cuts but I think people feel cuts could be made elsewhere, places like the MWRA, the MDC, the DEP.

Correctly or not, the people seem to feel that that's where the fat is, if you want to call it fat.

Well, that's just not factual. The fact is the legislature has mandated. If you talk to any developer they will tell you the backlog in the DEQE, now the DEP, is enormous.

Well, I'll give you a for-instance; they just knocked off the planner for the Lowell Heritage Park, so the repair of the canal, which collapsed about two years ago, will not happen.

So the repair of a canal that fell down two years ago just won't happen.

What I'm trying to tell the governor is to bring in people from the private business sector and say look at us, top to bottom. That is, I think, the way to go about it.

That's a really interesting approach, one that I hadn't heard of. But I think one of the main problems is public perception; the public perceives that there is some enormous waste going on in state government; whether it's factual or not, doesn't really seem to matter. As long as they believe that, there will be the anti-tax sentiment.

If in fact that exists, and I think you're obviously right that it does, how do you dispel that perception, and a governor standing up and saying we've now achieved efficiency, is going to accomplish zero. The only group that can get up and say the system is running at an acceptable efficiency is the business group. They hopefully will come in, do what's necessary to put it in shape, and pronounce it in shape as soon as the reforms are instituted. And that's the only group that people will believe. Nobody inside the system is credible.

In this whole mess, which it really is right now, is there any one group or a person (it could never fall to a person, but) is there anyone to blame, or anyone to find fault with?

Well, everyone has their own theory; I'll tell you mine. If you ask the question: "Why is this happening now?"

My own theory about all this (I've thought about this a lot, and I'm not sure I'm right.)

An apology:

The Photography Editor would like to extend his apologies to Richard Smith who had several photographs mis-labeled in last week's photo spread. Richard submitted many fine photos of the rally at the State House and deserves the credit. Again, my apologies to Rich.

boycotted — canceling classes for about 450,000 students — that day to protest the legislature's decision.

"We're paying more and more," Brown complained, "but we're getting less and less." For instance, she said, the university library is ranked 99th out of 107 peer institutions. "Our library is losing, and the school is losing credibility," she said.

The legislature earlier in the year granted a 4 percent increase for higher education — not enough to keep up with inflation — but the university hiked tuition 8 percent, Brown noted.

Students are hoping the walkout, a public rally, a letter-writing campaign to legislators and a benefit dance for the beleaguered library will send a message to the legislature. "Hopefully," Brown said, "they won't be so quick to send the money elsewhere."

engineer feels that he/she works long days, works very hard, is always at risk, and is bearing the tax for someone who may not show up and work, someone who may be a friend. You have to make it clear to the legislature that the old game is over. You have to bring them in, give them power, and make them work.

You have no idea of the lasting impression of what ULowell did. People are still talking about it.

There is respect for students who are willing to say what they think.

Well, as one of the major coordinators of that, I was never more proud. We expected a minimum of 500 people and a maximum of 1000 students.

I will argue with you about your strategy, but in terms of the sheer number and how you all conducted yourselves, I think there is a spirit present. We're trying to create public interest—what comments would you have?

I don't want to denigrate what you did—where I differ with you is strategy. I think the focus should be on the people who will be here a year from now I would have focused on the legislature.

When Harry met Sally

"What about NO WAY OUT?" he asked. "The last two minutes spoil the whole movie," I answered. "What about SUSPECT?" he asked. "Dennis Quaid in a business suit talking to derelicts in a deserted depot in downtown D.C. without getting attacked. Come on." I answered. "Glen all your telling me is your opinion. What makes your opinion better than mine?" he asked. I replied, "I love to watch movies and I take what I've learned from those movies (in regards to performance, plot, theme, music score, etc.) and objectively apply it to each movie that I see. Besides, I'm in print." I didn't get a chance to tell him about the last movie I'd seen because he changed the subject but I kept thinking back on what we had been talking about and I applied it to WHEN HARRY MET SALLY...

ALL IN THE FAMILY's meathead, Rob Reiner, is no longer acting. He has turned his talents toward directing movies. He came up with the idea for WHEN HARRY MET SALLY from his own journey through the dating world after his divorce from actress Penny Marshall. Along with Nora Ephron (who wrote the movie), he created a screenplay that tracks the course of the friendship between Harry (Billy Crystal) and Sally (Meg Ryan), over a period of 13 years. The special thing about this movie is its emphasis on conversation. Harry and Sally meet (in 1977) on a road trip from Chicago to New York. They meet again five years later on an airplane and then two years after that in a bookstore, where their friendship is finally confirmed over dinner. Harry and Sally have their personal problems but they are able to deal with those problems by talking them over. Freud's theory of psychoanalysis realized by amateurs.

The appealing aspect of WHEN HARRY MET SALLY is the firm basis it has with reality. Harry and Sally are a sort of everyman for the eighties. As I watched them grow closer towards each other and listened to their conversations, I felt like they were living part of my life on screen. Billy Crystal establishes himself as an emphatic actor in the role of Harry. He showed me that he's not just a stand up comedian. Meg Ryan has always seemed wooden and featureless in her other movies. Her characterizations have often relied on the strength of her leading man. In the past she has chosen to follow, but in this movie she stands apart from her leading man as a whole character. She doesn't give a great performance but when compared to her other films (Presidio and Innerspace) you can see a new maturity and confidence in her ability.

The characters are all well developed individuals and that can be credited to the insightful Nora Ephron but the real star of this movie is Rob Reiner. WHEN HARRY MET SALLY is a big improvement over the subtle humorlessness of THE PRINCESS BRIDE and it is a welcome romantic comedy. Reiner handles the character interactions with an easy light direction. He also connects the movie's underlying theme of long lasting love and marriage without making the ending seem contrived.

Although this movie may not be showing in theaters any longer, I'm sure that its trip to video will be a short one. I saw it twice and I enjoyed myself both times. The film will have you singing "Let's Call The Whole Thing Off" by Louis Armstrong by the time the credits roll and you can count on a good discussion for the trip home. Reiner also contrived to include the title of his next film within the movie by having Harry read Stephen King's MISERY. That's what you call an inside joke. Enjoy!

Written and directed by Steven Soderbergh. With Andie MacDowell, Peter Gallagher, Laura San Giacomo, and James Spader.

When you walk into the neighborhood multiplex to catch the latest movie, you become, whether you're conscious of it or not, a voyeur. You pay an admission to sit in the dark in order to stare up at a giant screen that becomes a window to another world, a one-way mirror that lets you observe people interacting in a time and place strange and different from the world you inhabit.

A good movie does not let you sit passively; it draws you into its world, allowing you to go through new experiences vicariously. Too often, though, the pictures we go to see are irritatingly reminiscent of what we find on television, which broadcasts disposable programs like soaps and sit-coms—visual candy. Escaping to the cinema usually brings you the same cops, car crashes, and comic book characters only blown up to fit a movie screen. This movie season needed something new, original, startling and involving, and it finally got it in sex, lies, and videotape. Steven Soderbergh's directorial debut, and the film that beat this year's only other truly riveting film, Do The Right Thing, for the Palme d'Or in Cannes.

Former model Andie MacDowell plays Ann, the soft-spoken and unfulfilled wife of the egocentric Yuppie lawyer, John (Peter Gallagher). From the opening moments, Soderbergh forces us into the role of voyeur by having us overhear Ann's voice before we even see her—we literally eavesdrop on a session with her analyst. John is carrying on a torrid affair with Ann's sexual dynamo sister, Cynthia (played by the sultry, husky-voiced Laura San Giacomo), who is introduced in an erotic rendezvous with John. Because we are immediately exposed to each characters' most intimate moments, we are already deeply interested when Graham (James Spader), John's old college buddy, wanders into this ripe Louisiana scene.

Graham is a nice guy, but he's a loner and a little strange (he dreads getting a job or apartment because it would add more keys to his sole car key—he likes the comfort and simplicity of having only one key). At one point, he and Ann have an intimate conversation over lunch, where each tells the other something deeply personal. Their hesitant, self-conscious manner is realistic, but never boring or pretentious because the script is full of wit, surprises, and, of course, lots of sex; we hang onto every word. Once Soderbergh draws us in, he never lets go.

We eventually learn that Graham can satisfy his sexual urges only by watching videotapes of his interviews with women who talk about their sexual experiences. While we, as movie-going voyeurs, are drawn into a particular world, Graham employs his voyeuristic tendencies to detach himself from the people on his video screen, as well as those in his life.

What follows is a series of confrontations and resolutions between the four characters that ultimately reveal more about the nature of love than of sex. Films in which most of the action comes from the interaction between characters are rare, but as sex, lies and videotape proves, they can be among the most compelling.

MASSPIRG is here to stay

On Wednesday October 11, 1989, students at U-Lowell voted YES to continue the MASSPIRG chapter on campus for another two years. In terms of percentages, over 71% of those voting agreed that U-Lowell should continue our MASSPIRG chapter through a waivable four dollar per student per semester fee. These funds will then be pooled together with the other 26 other college chapters across the state and used to address environmental, consumer, and hunger/homelessness issues.

Presently, we here at the MASSPIRG chapter are going full steam ahead with a proposed referendum question for the 1990 Massachusetts election ballot. MASSPIRG, along with several other environmental groups, is now working with the Recycling Initiative Campaign to help them put a responsible packaging question on the ballot. Specifically, the proposed question would, as of 1996, require that all packaging sold in the state be either recyclable, made of recycled materials, or be reusable. This question will be addressing the fact that 30% of our solid waste stream is made up of packaging. In order to qualify this question the people at the Recycling Initiative Campaign need to gather nearly 100,000 registered voter signatures. In order to help them achieve this the U-Lowell MASSPIRG chapter is presently coordinating massive petition drives throughout the Lowell community. Furthermore, we are presently working with the SGA to coordinate a voter registration day so that U-Lowell students can get involved in qualifying this and another ballot question which the SGA is working to qualify. If you are at all interested in helping us out, please contact us by dropping a message in South SIC box #94 or call Bob Peavey at 452-9183.

In closing, we would like to thank all those environmentally conscious students that remembered to vote yes to continue our chapter. As for all those who did not vote or voted no, we certainly look forward to showing you how effective and important a MASSPIRG chapter is here at U-Lowell as a means for student citizen involvement. So please keep looking for these articles and stop by our office in Fox 509 with any questions or comments.

Oxfam at ULowell

Oxfam America is an international agency that funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in poor countries in Africa, Latin America, and Asia. It also prepares and distributes educational material for people in the United States on the issue of hunger.

The name "Oxfam" comes from the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, which was founded in England in 1942.

Oxfam America, which was formed in 1970 and is based in Boston, is one of seven autonomous Oxfams around the world.

More specifically, Oxfam at ULowell has a two-fold focus.

First, the program exists to help raise student awareness of the problem of hunger all over the globe, also, and equally important, the project works to raise money that is then sent directly to Oxfam America and used to feed and educate the poor.

Won't you please come and help this year's coordinating committee make this program a success just as it was last year and for several years before that. We need you!!!

See future Connector articles for details on upcoming meetings and events. Also, if interested in more info, contact: Lori DeMartin, Chairperson, Box #5095.

CONTRACT FOR LIFE

THE COLLEGE CONTRACT FOR LIFE BETWEEN FRIENDS

As students at _____, we recognize that many of our fellow students and friends choose to use alcoholic beverages and, that on occasion, some students may find themselves in a potential DWI situation.

Therefore, we have entered into a contract in which we agree that if we are ever in a situation where we have had too much to drink, or a friend or date who has had too much to drink, we will seek safe and sober transportation home.

We, the undersigned, also agree that we will provide or arrange safe, sober transportation home for each other should either of us face a situation where we have had too much to drink.

If we cannot find safe transportation, we will contact a taxi service, walk or stay the night.

University of Lowell Sports Car Club

The University of Lowell Sports Car Club held its 3rd Autocross of the fall 1989 semester this past Sunday, the 15th of October. Over thirty cars entered the event to test their driving skills on our Seudo-SCCA slalom and 180 degree looped-turnaround-off-set-staggered-chikane-whatchamacallit thing which was designed by our own Stu (Too Tight) Hall. For those of us who were there, no more needs to be said, but for the others, the ones who read this article and say "What the — is he talking about?"

An Auto Cross is a timed circuit around a large parking lot or airport runway. It consists of several obstacles which force the drivers into most awkward maneuvers so as to cause as much damage to their vehicles workings as possible. The competition becomes increasingly competitive and friends become enemies in a battle of car against car, and driver against driver.

All U.L.S.C.C. events are open to anyone who doesn't mind putting his/her car through some minor abuse. The next and last event of the fall 1989 season will be held on Sunday October 29th at the North Campus Riverside Parking lot at 10:00 a.m.

Anyone interested in the club or its events should contact Nick at 474-8927, or come to one of our weekly club meetings in Fox Hall room 523 on Tuesday nights at 7:30 p.m.

The following are times and placings for Sunday's Auto-X winners. Class 1 - Nick Koulopoulos, 1:23.819; Class 2 - D. Belpedio, 1:26.376; Class 3 - Julian Gent, 1 19.353; Class 4 - Julian Gent, 1 15.896; Class 5 - Eliot Sharabrook, 1 12.593; Class 6 - Sung Ho Rim, 1:24.396.

Officers for the council are: President, Tony Serino; Vice-President, Corinne McGovern; Secretary, Michele Backs; Treasurer, Todd Johnson; Senator, Ken Ritchie; Senator, Dan Dulaski.

Some future events include: Tony's Homemade Pizza party, Hiking trip, sporting events, Bud Plant tour, ski trip and more. See Connector and/or flyer for more upcoming info. Lori DeMartin

University Housing Available

On-Campus Housing

Space is now available in the on-campus residence halls for full-time undergraduate women. Space assignments for women are available in most residence halls! Housing and space assignments will be offered on a first come, first served basis. Interested women should drop by the Office of Residence Life in Cumnock Hall from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. or call at x2100.

Undergraduate Males interested in on-campus housing should stop by the Office of Residence Life to place their name on a waiting list for openings that occur during the Fall Semester. Most undergraduate men desiring housing will be able to be accommodated sometime during the Fall Semester.

University-Operated Housing in Downtown Lowell

Undergraduate housing is available for men and women in the Crescent Building. Freshmen are eligible to apply for residency in this building. Space will be offered first come, first served. Rent is $285/month including utilities.

Graduate housing is available for men only in the Bridge Street Building. All residents receive a private bedroom while sharing the kitchen, living room and bath with 2-3 other roommates. Rent is $290/month including utilities.

Both Crescent and Bridge Street living offers furnished and carpeted apartments, laundry facilities, free parking (limited) and free shuttle bus service to campus. Interested students should stop by the Office of Residence Life in Cumnock Hall from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday or call x2100 for more information.

University Housing Spring Semester 1990

Students applying for housing in the on-campus residence halls for Spring Semester 1990 should stop by the Office of Residence Life in Cumnock Hall from 3:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday or call at ext. 2100. Second semester housing will be offered on a first come, first served basis. Students who are already on a waiting list for fall semester housing must contact the office of Residence Life to make sure their name is transferred to the Spring Semester "Housing Priority List". Be sure to provide your social security number, mailing address and telephone number.

ARMY OFFICER TRAINING WHY WE ARE ON CAMPUS

The U.S. Army Reserve Officer Training Corps can be found on over 420 campuses across the nation in addition to the University of Lowell. Why does the US Army invest so much time, money, and manpower to establish these Departments of Military Science? All of these academic departments are a part of a nationwide organization known within the military as the US Army Cadet Command, and the best way in which to answer that question is to state simply that our title describes our business: We are for and about cadets. Nobody in the Army, short of fighting a war, has a more important mission than this. Our mission is short on words, but overwhelming in responsibility. TO COMMISSION THE FUTURE OFFICER LEADERSHIP OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY.

The operative word "Commission" denotes a multiplicity of functions: recruiting, selecting, motivating, training, and retaining. Commissioning is the crowning achievement of a complex nurturing process. We recruit quality students, retain quality cadets, and commission quality officers for the active Army, Army Reserve, and National Guard.

The role of our colleges and universities in national security and the military is of vital importance. There is no similar group of higher educational institutions in the world, wither in size or quality, and the University of Lowell is a premiere example. These colleges and universities offer our nation a host of capabilities: research and development, engineering, business and economics, law and medicine, and the social sciences. In addition to this tremendous contribution, they are the providers of the Army Officer Corps. ROTC is alive and well on college campuses across our nation and from this richly diverse group of academic institutions the Army develops the vast majority of its officers. This is a healthy phenomenon because our officers represent the rich diversity of the United States and its multiplicity of outstanding universities. It also gives university leaders a personal involvement in our national security. They have a vested interest in the Army Officer Corps and must imbue their students/cadets with the values they deem essential in an American university graduate. This plurality, this magnificent national diversity, mixed with tough CADET COMMAND training, gives our officer corps a unique, distinctly American strength—very necessary when these cadets take the oath to defend the world's greatest democracy. These future leaders represent America.

In today's highly competitive world, it takes extraordinary achievement on the part of American industry to survive and prosper. Leadership is an absolutely essential commodity in making such achievement possible. Some say there exists in our society today a poverty

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS

Program Objectives

- The basic objectives of the Burndy U.S. Electrical Group Engineering Training Program is to expose qualified college graduates to the world of connectors and installation tools.

Real-World Responsibilities

- The program recognizes the knowledge and basic experience you have already gained in acquiring your degree and will supplement it with real-world, problem-solving opportunities.

How the Program Works

- The program cycle lasts 6 months and begins with a brief orientation period which introduces you to the language, philosophy, and technology of connectors and presents you with a general overview of the marketplace served by Burndy. You and other candidates will then work in several functional areas on a rotational basis. In addition to your time in Engineering. At the end of the 6-month program, you will be assigned to one of the engineering departments.

Ongoing Appraisal (Progress)

- You'll know how you are performing as you progress through the program. An ongoing appraisal will be done by your supervisor at each assigned function or location. In addition, you are asked for your own opinion on your training and progress.

To find out more about these exciting opportunities, please sign up for our information session and On-Campus Interviews.

Let's put out the fire first

Bob Manning Editor-in-Chief

The State of Massachusetts is a building. This building is on fire, in fact, it is engulfed in flames. If your house or building was on fire would you call the carpenter before you called the fire department? Of course not, you must put out the fire before you can rebuild.

People, who in these times of crisis, within the state who continually call for new taxes are trying to rebuild before the damage is contained. Right now the last thing we want to give the people who havemis-managed and mis-spent our tax dollars is more money.

What we do want to do right now is force the legislature and the Governor to make cuts where the taxpayers want them made. People must let there legislators know where they should initiate these cuts. The one area we all seem to agree on is that we should not cut education. Both K-12 and higher education has suffered dearly over the past 18 months. It is about time some other areas start to feel the squeeze.

For example, an aid to a prominent legislator told me in confidence that, "working for the MWRA is like dying and going to heaven. You do nothing and make 40 grand per year." This is totally unacceptable. Other areas of known abuse such as the MDC should also be seriously looked at. The one place everybody would like to look at is the Governors immediate staff. I personally met with the Governor two weeks ago, in this meeting there were no less than six people standing and watching. Maybe they did serve some purpose, but I would question as to wheather or not they were all needed.

Is raising taxes the immediate answer? Contrary to what one editorial states this week, I submit to you that taxes are not the immediate answer.

Fact: Over the last four years the state budget has more than doubled.

Fact: Full time salaries in state government have risen by more than 45% in five years.

It may be me, but these increases are considerably more than the rates of inflation during this period.

We also know that education has gotten rich over the past five years. Where has all the money gone? I can't answer that question, but we should hold those who can answer that question accountable. The first places to be cut should be those places that recieved that money.

No, new taxes are not the answer. Someday, a long way from now, we may have a state government that is operating somewhat efficiently. When that time comes, it may be realistic to examine the tax situation in the state.

We are a long was from being at that point and we show no immediate signs of arriving at this point.

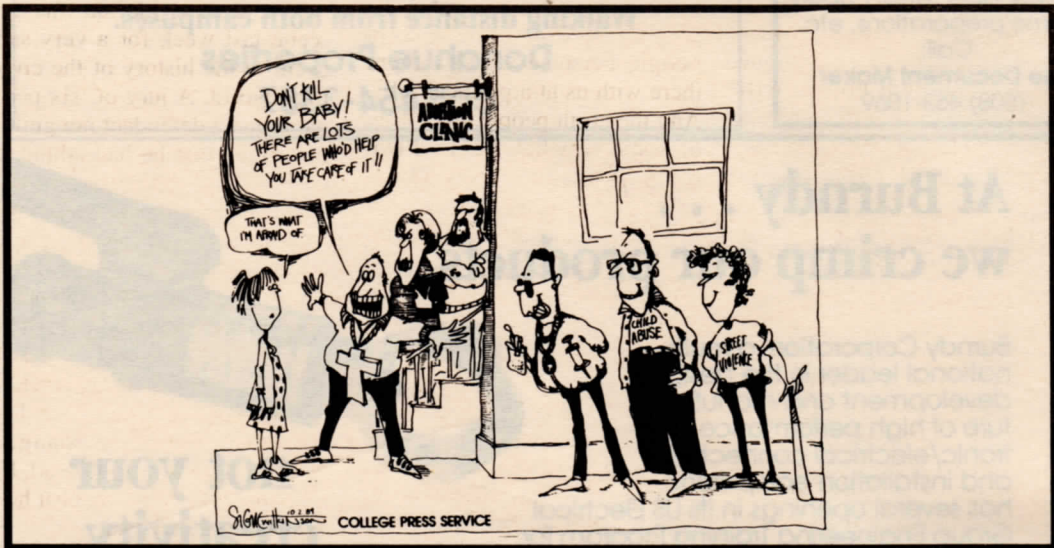

Scenario: The state is operating at an efficient level and people believe that it is. I would be willing to all but guarantee that if a reasonable tax package was presented that was dedicated to K-12 education, higher education, and our transportation infrastructure (meaning our roads and bridges, which are crumbling), I would bet that very few people, including republicans like myself, would support it. I would bet that Barbara Anderson, who has been portrayed by some people as nothing short of the anti-christ, would support it.

The people of this state will not stand for new taxes right now, and rightly so. People who call for immediate taxes are not being realistic. Even if new taxes were instituted, does anybody think we would see that money in higher education or here at ULowell, I don't think so. Stop kidding yourselves. Let's put out the fire, then we'll talk.

note that quote

"I believe in my right to be wrong, and still more in my right to be right."

-Owen Lattimore

Rally received poor coverage

It is disturbing and frustrating that the Globe saw fit to run a small photo and caption buried deep inside your Thursday, October 5, 1989 edition of a ULowell students' rally at the State House. These same students last spring demanded and received a 30% increase in tuition and fees to hep offset the cutback in state funding of higher education. They now feel betrayed, used, and fear the quality of their education is in jeopardy because of new, proposed cuts. The Governor recognized their sincerity and agreed to meet with student leaders. The Boston Herald obviously felt the rally was newsworthy and important.

If these same students had caused a disruption at a sporting event, you would have featured it in headlines on the front page of your sports section. When they acted as responsible adults, a major recognized, award winning newspaper did not feel it worthy of anything but a passing remark.

Someone's priority and values are out of line. Perhaps it is time for your editorial staff to remember that the young learn from the examples of their elders. The Globe seems to be saying that throwing a stone, selling dope, assaulting, and murdering are more newsworthy than the desire to open a book and learn. It is quite true that lurid stories sell more newspapers. A newspaper as distinguished as yours however, should have put ideals, common sense, and youthful integrity on at least an even par.

You failed not only your leadership and our students; but, you failed your own tradition of integrity and responsibility.

Thomas H. Duffy
President

ULowell Alumni Association

Faculty takes pride in students actions

It was a privilege to witness the 2000 ULowell students who sacrificed their time Wednesday, October 4, 1989 to petition the legislature to stop further cuts in the already woefully decimated education budget. Those faculty who were present on Boston Common felt great pride in the fact that these young men and women were able to express themselves so forcefully and maturely. As their teachers we need to help them understand that the depletion of funding for education and human services is a direct result of the federal policy of the past eight years and the disastrous effect that it has had upon the traditions of educational excellence and human compassion which have made this nation great. It is on the local and state level the result of the after math of Prop 2 1/2 that swept this state nearly a decade ago. Indeed, the crisis would have occurred much earlier had not the strength of our economy and the revenues it produced enabled the state to return much needed tax money to the cities and towns thereby preventing the decimation of local public school education.

Even amateur students of history and economics know that there is a natural if not inexorable ebb and flow to prosperity and its opposite hard times. However, the strength of the Massachusetts' economy has always been linked to its highly-trained and well-educated work force, its international reputation as a center of higher education, medicine and the arts. It is a place where people want to live and educate their children. What a sad commentary that out of its current economic prosperity, the people of Massachusetts are failing their young people in their hour of greatest need. The economy of Massachusetts is not imploding on itself; it is, however, entering a long-anticipated period of economic 'slowdown'. At the same time, it finds itself victimized by the federal policy that has made the concept of 'taxation' an anathema to nearly anyone who can spell the word.

We can see the effects of the concept that a 'tax-free' business community and a 'tax free' upper class have had upon our nation, already. A walk down any city street makes it impossible to avoid the number of homeless and helpless that have been affected by a soaring real estate market that was not matched by any planned for investment in affordable housing. The number of soup kitchens in this country multiplies almost exponentially with every passing day. A walk down the streets of the Acre can show you numerous examples of children who are elementary school dropouts with no parents visible to provide them with supervision and care. The cost of private higher education has soared to the degree that only the very rich or the exceptionally talented can enter such institutions. The responsibility of educating the middle and working class youth of this Commonwealth has thus fallen upon the state at the very time when growing numbers of citizens have bought into the rhetoric of Barbara Anderson and her ilk, namely, that a modern state can function without any revenue base at all.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is third highest nationally in per capita income. It is thirty-eighth in per capita tax assessment. No one wishes to pay higher taxes. But it stands to reason that until the national government addresses the impact of their irresponsible fiscal initiatives upon the deterioration of quality of life in this country and acts upon it by restoring the money it has taken away from education, health and human services and other programs necessary to the life, liberty and pursuit of happiness in this country, we must make some sacrifice for the next generation for whom the future, at this moment, seems very grey, indeed.

It seems to me to be morally bankrupt of us as a faculty if we do not work in solidarity with

Paul Geary continues

Last week our editor-in-chief, Bob Manning, wrote an article which hopefully, along with the rally at the state house, will spur a new spirit at this university. I think that it already has. At the risk of engaging in hyperbole, I think that what happened at the state house was a watershed for the university's student body. No longer can anyone with any authority say that the students at U Lowell don't care about anything.

In the past I have commented on the apathetic nature of the students here in the pages of this paper. I always had the feeling that the only school-related issues which every student discussed with any regularity was from the standpoint of either a north or south campus bias. You've heard the comments before; you've read the graffiti on the walls. Things like, "South campus majors are airheads, and are all people who can't hack engineering," and "North campus people are nerds who spend all their time counting the $30,000 they think they'll get a year when they graduate." I too engaged in this kind of discourse, at least to the extent that I hoped that for their sake the north campus people would get the $30,000 because we south campus people were sure having a lot more fun than them.

To an extent the rally changed that. There were hundreds of people from each campus who came together for the same cause — to save our university from financial decimation. In the process, I think that the south campus people gained a measure of respect for the north people because we saw them there with us at a political rally. And the north people got a taste of some of what we do down there on south. They saw a rally that took nerve, dedication, organization, and a little bit of brains to put together. That is very refreshing.

The very fact that one-tenth of the entire student population of U Lowell rode thirty miles in those horribly uncomfortable buses to show the governor how they felt is something that a lot of us will not forget soon. The something that a lot of us will not forget soon. The fractious society that is our school was galvanized because we as a whole were threatened. I think that at this point we should not only continue to fight for the school's survival; we as students should fight for some respect, which U Lowell clearly does not get its share of in proportion to the academic and athletic accolades that we bring to this state.

After all, this is the school whose engineering department is world-class. US News and World Report recently ranked U Lowell in the top twenty technical schools in the entire country. And I do seem to recall that the Chiefs won the NCAA Div. II basketball title two years ago. Our political science department, if you will indulge me a plug for my own department, is coming into its own.

Our international relations club has won four national titles in model leagues competition since professor Dean Bergeron started it six short years ago. The club has won so many individual awards for excellence in preparation and debate that it would be too cumbersome to enumerate here.

I could go on, and I will. At U Lowell we have the likes of Professor Mary Blewitt, who has won several awards for her research and writing about the labor movement in US history. We have Professor Joyce Denning, who has honored by the governor last year from her decades-long, consistently high contribution to state education. I'm sure there are plenty of other students, groups, and faculty members who are worthy of mention in these pages for their excellence. Unfortunately I am not familiar enough with goings on at north campus to be aware of everything, so why don't one of you northites write to the Connector and let us know about some of those people? It can only help the morale and reputation of the university if you do.

In light of this, does it bother anyone other than me that any time state education makes the news the focus of same seems to be on U Mass-Amherst? Yes they are the biggest but are clearly not the best. Students who can't get into U Lowell go there instead. Just last week the Globe did an article in anticipation of "rally II" and mentioned only the Zoo and of all places, Fitchburg State.

It should be noted that our compatriots at U-Mass Amherst were conspicuous by their absence at the rally-that-started-it-all. It seems that it "wasn't a priority" for them. I certainly cannot imagine anything more important happening in Amherst on a Wednesday. I even heard that one of their student leaders said that rally would be "too radical." Radical? To demonstrate in front of the state house? If that's what they're being taught over there, I say that the first budget casualty should be the U Mass-Amherst political science department.

The students at U Mass-Boston, another school that gets a lot of press, had no excuse at all not to be there. They could have taken a 75-cent subway ride and been with us. Their buildings are literally falling apart, and yet they couldn't take two hours to come show support for the cause. Maybe they figured that if their buildings fall into Boston Harbor, they'll get some of the federal clean-up money.

Of course by the time this is printed there will have been a state house rally on Wednesday (yesterday as you read this) involving the very schools that I am criticizing. And while I am glad that they finally woke up, I can't help but feel a bit resentful that they decided to wait to see if it was safe to speak up. They allowed U Lowell to stick its neck out to see if it would get chopped off. It didn't; we succeeded, and now all of the trendy young activists from the "zoo" know that it is safe to come out. Gee, thanks.

Meanwhile, we at U Lowell can pat ourselves on the back. While we're at it, we can salute those who organized our rally and made it more successful than I think anybody thought possible. I'll be honest, I thought Tom Winston was absolutely out of his mind when he told me that twenty buses were being rented. We ended up needing more, and many people took their own cars. It was simply a triumph for U Lowell.

Rape means violence, not sex

The state of Florida was the scene last week for a very sad event in the history of the civilized world. A jury of six people found a defendant not guilty of a rape that he had admitted committing because, in the words of the jury foreman, the woman who was raped "... was asking for it."

The facts of the case apparently are not in contention. The victim was a scantily dressed prostitute. The alleged perpetrator initially planned to buy her services. When she changed her mind, he didn't. Instead, he held her at knife point, beat her, raped her and left her.

More than a few comments have been written to express the outrage that a case like this elicits. And, in deed, more should be written so that this case does not pass us by too quickly. More than expressing outrage, however, we need to come to grips with the underlying why of this case which, if we look closely, we will see is so patently clear.

What is at issue is a fundamental confusion over the nature of rape. Rape is an act of violence. It is about power, force, domination and the total disregard for the value and dignity of another human being. It is not about sex and passion or about romance and desire. And here in lies the problem. All too often, rape is confused on this level and seen as something to do with sex when in fact, sex is merely the form in which a particularly unvarnished form of violence appears.

Nor is this confusion a male preserve. The jury that found the Florida rapist innocent of his crime was made up of three women and three men. The women presumably agreed with the analysis of the jury foreman. Much the same opinion was expressed in the Lowell Sun earlier this week when two out of five women interviewed about this case also thought the prostitute more or less deserved what she got.

Closer to home, date rape or acquaintance rape often reflects this fundamental confusion. Sometimes the situations are a bit more subtle than in the Florida case; but the facts are all the same. Regardless of what takes place before the decisive moment, as soon as a woman says no, the nature of what follows is fundamentally and irrevocably different. It makes no difference whether one is married or single, engaged or a stranger. Any man presuming to force himself upon a woman who has signaled her objection is guilty of rape. At this point, any semblance of love, romance or intimacy ceases and is replaced by violence, domination and power. There is no middle ground.

It has often been said that every cloud has its silver lining. If the Florida case has a silver lining, then it has to be the extreme nature of the circumstances involved. The fact that the woman who was raped happened to be a prostitute has absolutely nothing to do with the fact of rape. To assert that some people ask to be the victims of violence and humiliation is, on its face, ludicrous ... prostitutes included. The unusual circumstances of this case provide an opportunity to view rape with a pristine clarity that is not often available. The silver lining is the bold relief into which this case throws the heinous crime of rape.

Last week's travesty of justice in Florida should be carefully studied both by men and women. It presents a teachable moment that we ought not let pass us by.

our students and share with them some of our experience and assume at least an equal responsibility for exercising our civic and professorial duties to prevent the utter collapse of public higher education in Massachusetts, today. As President Hogan pointed out "this is a democracy." Democracy only works, however, when the electorate participates in the everyday and continuous burden of educating our representatives to their duty and our students to their rights, and responsibilities for exercising those rights. I urge every one of my colleagues to begin the educational process and to give these very brave and enthusiastic and caring young people the support and experience they will need if their efforts to save our public higher education system are going to work.

ARMY OFFICER TRAINING

of leadership—evidenced in part by a loss of confidence in, and respect for, authority. Yet the need for compelling and creative leadership continues undiminished.

The most successful companies in America look for leadership abilities in those they employ. They believe that the on-campus ROTC experience is one healthy breeding ground for many important leadership qualities, and for growing awareness of the pride associated with being an active participant on winning, get-it-done teams. This background, complemented by solid grounding in engineering, business management, or the liberal arts, can mean real opportunities for career advancement.

The training offered by the Army ROTC Department focuses on the "fine art" of leadership, and as in any fine art it takes time, patience and practice to become proficient. The training supplements the traditional college curriculum and contributes immeasurably to the individual's success whether he or she elects to pursue an active military career, or to serve as a Reserve officer in conjunction with a civilian career. ROTC students frequently begin their civilian careers at a higher level of responsibility than other college graduates, and go on to even higher levels of success. The University of Lowell's Army ROTC office is located in Annex #7 on north campus.

New Way-Beginning for Second Semester to sign up for Independent Activity 39.227

Since the course requires the instructors' permission and since the computer cannot give permission, we have devised a new method to allow students to register on the computerized registration sheet when doing all other courses. This should simplify matters (one hopes!!).

1. During the advising period, students wishing to take Independent Activity will go to the

- Independent Activity professor to seek permission.
2. If okayed, the Independent Activity professor will fill out a form granting permission and give a copy to the student.
3. The student takes that form to his/her advisor.
4. Students presenting such a form to the advisor may sign up for 39.337
5. No form - No Permission -

no sign up.
If this goes as planned, it should save time and energy. Students can then sign up at the same time they do all other courses. Should a student wish to add it at a later date, he/she would then follow the normal "add" procedures. - Prof Chamberlain, Chair, Physical Education

"I'M MAKING A DIFFERENCE."

Lee Blanchard
Univ. of Lowell '89

"I worked hard for my accounting degree, and I didn't want to be 'just another warm body' at a monster firm. That's why I went with Mullen & Company. I really make a difference here."

Mullen & Company offers you a chance to contribute right away. With a broad client base and a reputation as an innovative leader, you'll be working for one of New England's top accounting firms.

Mullen & Company will be conducting on-campus interviews on November 15. If you'd like to make a difference, schedule a meeting through the placement office.

SCHOLARSHIPS

The First Annual "Know When To Say When"
Student Poster Competition

Announcing a Student Poster Competition with $20,000 in Scholarship Prizes to be held in conjunction with the National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

We're looking for the best poster concepts that creatively express the need for responsible decision making about alcohol.

A grand prize scholarship of $5,000 will be awarded in each of two categories. Five runners-up in each category will receive $1,000 scholarships.

The competition is open to all undergraduate students (not just fine art students) enrolled in a U.S. college or university for the Fall 1989 term.

Entry Forms may be obtained:

U Lowell wins the Cup

This past Sunday the U Lowell Crew Team competed in the Numerica's Cup in Manchester, New Hampshire. Overall it was a highly successful day for the entire team. The regatta consisted of schools from both Division I and II.

The Varsity women won both of their races easily. The winning crew consisted of Eileen Monahan, Andrea Moulton, Denise LeDuca, Heather Mulvey, Ann Gilbert (who later took a swim in the Merrymuck), Sherri Ford, Michelle Stella, Ann Mekal, and Cathy-Joe Bastein. Coach Pam Besold felt that her crew rowed well and knew that a win was brewing. Coach Besold said, "They have been coming along well in recent practices. Now we are going to put our focus in winning our next race in Worcester."

The Women's Varsity four rowed a strong race according to Coach Besold. She believes that more hard work will definitely benefit this green crew. The boat consists of Lisa Cavallero, Linda Romkey, Mary Beth Hayes, Kim Popavach and Jen Beaumont. The boat came in third in its category.

The Novice women won their second consecutive race this year. Coach DeFillippo was ecstatic over his lady's performance. The Novice women's B rowed a strong race, coming in 7th, while the A boat won. The A boat included Lisa Cecchini, Helen Silva, Shannon Plisinski, Karin Laping, Susan Heath, Jen McEnaney, Stephanie Spaeth, Brenda Cailler and Kerry Patenaude.

The Novice men won their race handily, which pleased Coach Pinard. The Novice B boat rowed a strong race, however it was the A boat that stole the show, winning the race category. This win is also the A boat second consecutive win this year.

The Varsity and Junior Varsity men came in 5th and 11th, respectively. The Varsity men were the first Division II school to cross the line behind perennial Division I power MIT. Coach Stu Smith was pleased with both of his boats' performance and sees this race as a stepping stone to the future.

The combination of points from all the boats put the team over the top allowing them to take home the Numerica's Cup. This is a great moment for the team which will set high standards for the future.

Water Polo Club

A new sport was introduced to the University of Lowell. The water polo club had its first scrimmage against Holy Cross College, and the result was sweet success: a 12-5 victory.

The club originated four weeks ago and has been growing and practicing under the direction of Professor Mike Jones. Freshman Wendy Taylor enjoyed her first game; while freshman Tom Robertson, a gold medalist at the Bay State Games, contributed his expertise.

The start of the game was delayed; and the Holy Cross team was unable to bring a full playing squad. U Lowell players Ken Kelly, Rich Conrad, and others rotated into the Holy Cross line-up to help them reach playing strength. The U Lowell defense was bolstered by key players such as Diane Gray, who helped to break up Holy Cross offensive strikes. Paul "Hammer" Hession played solid defense by sticking with his man and killing Holy Cross breakaways. Mark "Brick Wall" Garipay played great defense and shut down every player Holy Cross put against him.

Goalies Neil Sullivan and Mark Garneau both played solid in nets and were an important factor in the U Lowell win. Sullivan blocked 7 for 12 and Garneau blocked 10 for 3. Neil also had a great offensive game.

The rest of the U Lowell offense was breaking and scoring. Mike Boswell, Mark Rebillard, Pete "Grease" McCarron and Tom Robertson, with their fast break, rendered the Holy Cross defense useless.

Advisor Mike Jones is very excited by the success. He feels that the team played very well, over coming their lack of experience. According to President Mark Garneau, "with some work U Lowell can become a dominating factor in the Northeast water polo league".

Chiefs skate past Concordia 6-4

In the first scrimmage of the season, the U Lowell Chief's played an inspired third period to defeat the visiting Concordia University Stingers 6-4 last Saturday at the Joe Tully Forum.

The Stingers took an early lead in the first period, but the Chief's came back with a goal at the 18:19 mark by freshman defenseman Tim Smallwood, originally credited to sophomore right winger Dave Gatti.

The comeback continued in the second period, first with a 20 foot slapshot from the point by junior right winger Steve Ablitt at 10:19, then a few minutes later on a goal from freshman right winger Gerry Daley.

Despite being out shot 15-10, the third period clearly belonged to U Lowell. Concordia opened the scoring at 6:02 on a goal by defenseman E.J. Janiszewski, and they weren't heard from again. The Chief's went on to score three unanswered goals, the first of which was scored by the "Hanson Brothers" line of triplets Glenn, Brian, and Craig Seabury at the 11:15 mark. A minute and thirty seconds later, senior left winger Conrad Thomas scored, with an assist from senior right winger Jeff Flaherty. The Chief's later closed the scoring at 18:05 on another Flaherty-Thomas combination.

Final shots on goal for the evening were 39-27 in favor of Concordia.

NOTES... The Chief's rode on good performances by forwards Conrad Thomas, who had a goal and two assists, and Jeff Flaherty, with a goal and an assist, not to mention smart defensive work by freshman Tim Smallwood and Keith Carney, and some nice saves by sophomore goalie Mark Richards... On the whole, the freshman played well in their first college game... The Stingers were obviously frustrated by the aggressive play of Gerry Daley, Pete Sentner, and some good hits by Steve Ablitt... Final cuts were made after Saturday's game by Coach Bill Riley... Next up for the Chief's is a final pre-season game Saturday, October 21st vs A.I.C., game time 7PM at Joe Tully Forum... by Susan Whitehead Box 5477S.

Chiefs stop Bucs 27-15

The U Lowell Chiefs moved one step closer towards their quest of an undefeated season by beating Mass. Maritime last Saturday 27-15. The victory was very difficult for two major reasons: The Chiefs sentenced 14 of their players to a one-game suspension for missing a practice. Many of players missed the game due to injuries. Tom Lafferty is out for the season after damaging his knee against Curry College. Captain Tim Donahoe, Tim Noonan, Tim Kenny, and Joel Cote all missed playing due to injury. Captain Mike Burns and QB Robby Aylward played hurt.

With all this going against them the Chiefs played good. Many of the younger guys had to contribute heavily. John Batts and Jeff Dorandi filled in for Donahoe remarkably well, Matt Fionda did a good job at tight end taking Lafferty's place, and Al Troisi did a great job replacing Noonan. Although their were many new faces in the lineup, it was the familiar seniors who carried the team. For the offense, Jim Mogauro (3 touchdowns), Jon Symonds (9 catches) and Rob Aylward (266 yards) played outstanding games. Mike Burns (interception), Vinny Piro (6 tackles) and "Prime Time" led the defense. Dan Ford added a touchdown and Bob Cote had a big sack to help the Chiefs increase their record to 6-0.

This weekend the Chiefs take on the Bisons of Nichols College. This is our annual homecoming game, it will also determine the North Division Champions. The game is 1pm at Cawley Stadium and promises to be a real battle. On attending the game, here are some Chiefs you should be familiar with:

Coach Scannell - The Chief of the Chiefs. Cross between Woody Hayes and Barry Switzer. His team hasn't lost a home game in two seasons. Last year NEFC's Coach of the Year.

Coach Laws - Offensive Coordinator. Mike Ditka look-a-like who is the mind behind one of the best offenses in New England.

The Players: Robby Aylward #1 The skinny kid with the golden arm Ronny Anderson #14 Captain Crunch The hardest hitter on team John Batts #31 MWA (Methuen With Attitude) Tom "The Rock" Bradley #84 Good hands, sometimes??? Mike Burns #22 Although he may seem sweet and innocent he's a cheap-shot artist Bob "Rag Man" Cote #90 The messiest guy on the field, very acrobatic Darrell Davidow #67 Blazing speed from Seakonk Tito DiVita #99 Country-boy with world class cow-tipping ability. The fearless leader of the whole defense Jeff Dorandi #60 PSYCHO Matt Fionda #81 Bright red gloves The HOGS the nameless offensive linemen who will quickly respond to "Dinner is served!" Jim Lawson #91 Huge guy, can't miss him Jim Mogauro #32 Mister Excitement.

Tim Noontime" Noonan #69 Gives QB's more problems than a math book Vincenzo Piro #44 The Godfather Has his own cheering section D.Primetime Rich $6 Describes himself as: "150 pounds of twisted steel and sex appeal Bobby Scaccia #45 Not "Primetime" but a real PTP'er Jon Symonds #88 The big play man.

Pat's Picks

By Patrick Sheehan

This weeks first pick is who will start for the Patriots this Sunday in Frisco. No Flutieball. It's the return of Grogan's Heroes. To the picks.

New England Patriots (+11) at San Francisco 49ers. Greg Davis asked Flutie not to score any touchdowns last week. You see those 52 yard field goals are easy, it's those pesky extra points that Davis can't handle. All Pats points come via field goals. 49ers 31 Patriots 15

Green Bay Packers (+4) at Miami Dolphins Going down to Miami and squishing the fish just isn't the big deal it used to be. Packers 27 Dolphins 21

Dallas Cowboys (+10) at Kansas City Chiefs Who needed Herschel Walker anyway? Chiefs 24 Cowboys 17

Indianapolis Colts (+7) at Cincinnati Bengals Bengals ended 12 game unbeaten streak at home last week. Another week another streak. Bengals 41 Colts 14

LA Raiders (+7) at Philadelphia Eagles Look out Bo is going to actually try this week. Raiders 27 Eagles 21

Minnesota Vikings (-8) at Detroit Lions Herschel Walker is the ingredient the Vikings were lacking. Look out NFL. Vikes 38 Lions 9

New York Jets (+7) at Buffalo Bills The AFC East is worse than the A.L. East. Unbelievable but true. Bills 26 Jets 17

Pittsburgh Steelers (+9 1/2) at Houston Oilers So I said Chuck Knoll was washed up. He probably doesn't read me anyway. Steelers 14 Oilers 12

Tampa Bay Bucs (+8) at Washington Redskins This game has large wild card playoff implications. Seriously. Redskins 26 Bucs 10

Atlanta Falcons (+2 1/2) at Phoenix Cardinals Phoenix scores at will. The problem is every time the Cardinals score Deion Sanders runs back the ensuing kickoff for a TD. Falcons win in OT when Sanders returns opening kickoff for game winning touch down. Falcons 41 Cardinals 35

Denver Broncos (+3) at Seattle Sea Hawks Will no team assume supremacy in the Average Football Conference? Sea Hawks 21 Broncos 17

New Orleans Saints (+7) at LA Rams Saints slip back into mediocrity mode. Rams 31 Saints 16

New York Giants (-5) at San Diego Chargers

Why can't I fathom a quarterback like Phil Simms wearing a Patriots uniform? Giants 27 Chargers 13

Chicago Bears (+1 1/2) at Cleveland Browns Be prepared for about 99 camera shots of Mike Ditka getting pissed off on the sidelines. In spite of Ditka's prediction Bears manage to win another game. Bears 31 Browns 29
Last weeks results: Right 7 Wrong 7
versus spread: Right 8 Wrong 6
Season results: Right 40 Wrong 30
versus spread: Right 34 Wrong 36

EXTRA POINTS

The Patriots are one game out of the wild card race in the AFC. The Anemic Football Conference is getting left behind. The Celtics continue to amaze their competition. I just hope someone from WEEI can make a jump shot? The Bruins have never recovered from Sinden picking Gord Kluzak instead of Brian Bellows.

ULowell soon to be the site of the East coast's first Funny Animal Society.

You know what Funny Animals are right? Anthropomorphics...cartoon animals... children's book illos.. You know! Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck and the rest of the WB gang, Walt Disney, Newspaper strips like Bloom County and Calvin and Hobbes, Comic books like Albedo, Cerebus, and Omaha the Cat Dancer, Those hip and honkin' Connector Comix animals, Japanese stuff like Kimba the White Lion. Books you had when you were little, remember Richard Scarry's Greatest Storybook Ever?

Yeah, All these are Funny Animals. And believe it or not there is no East Coast Anthropomorphic activity at all! Hard to comprehend, I know, but we'd like to change that! We're the Anthropomorphic Society (but only until we can think of a better name) AND WE NEED YOU! We will publish a magazine that will travel as far as California, Canada, and even Australia! No joke. We'll also be in contact with other Furry Clubs from across country, and hopefully have some major league video parties.

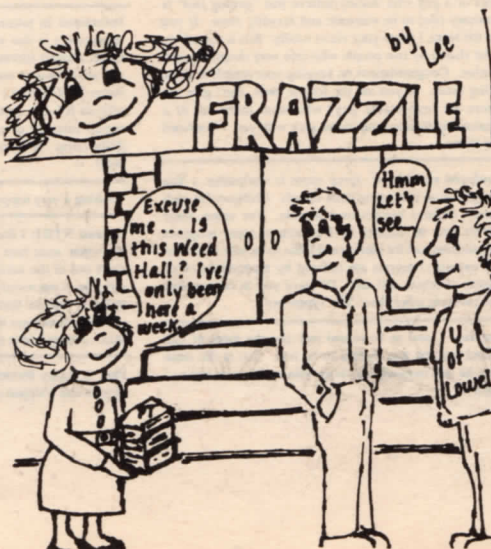

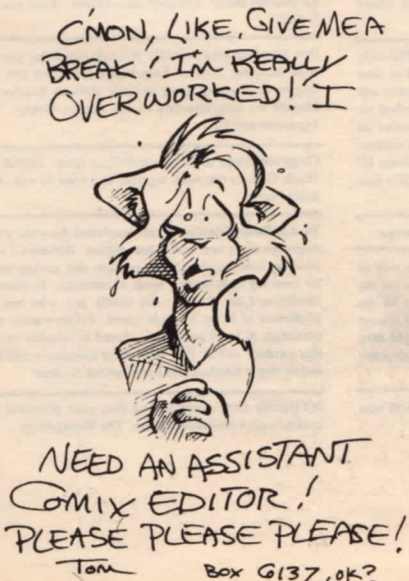

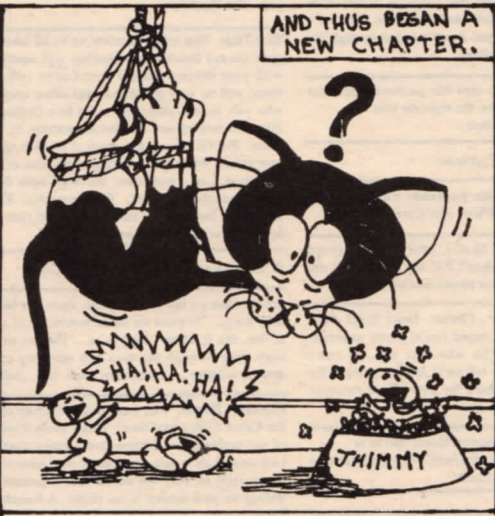

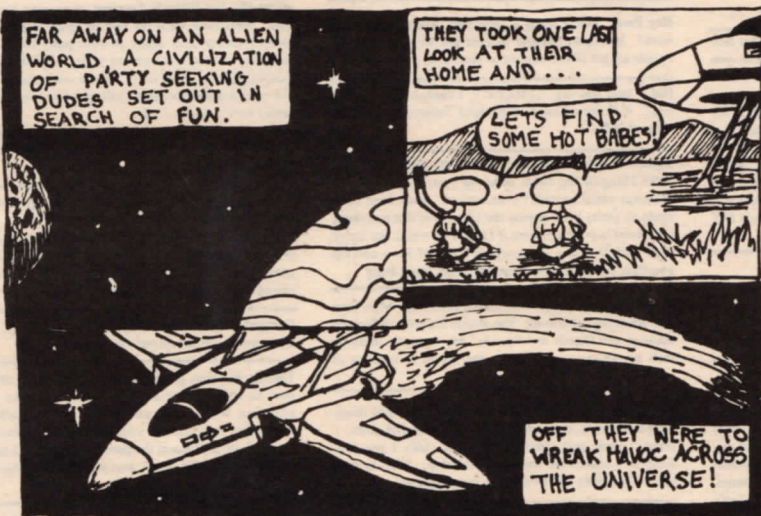

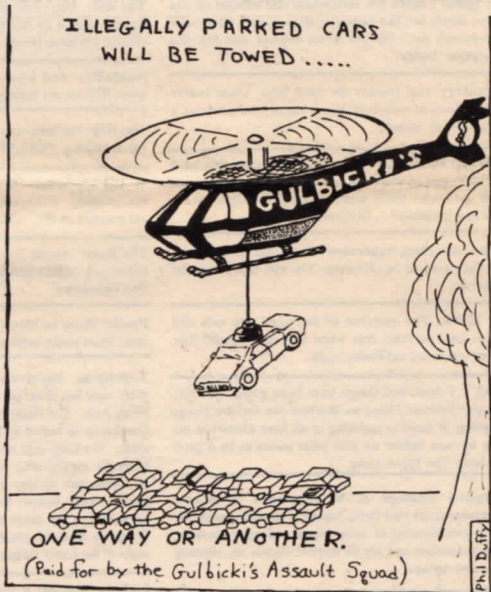

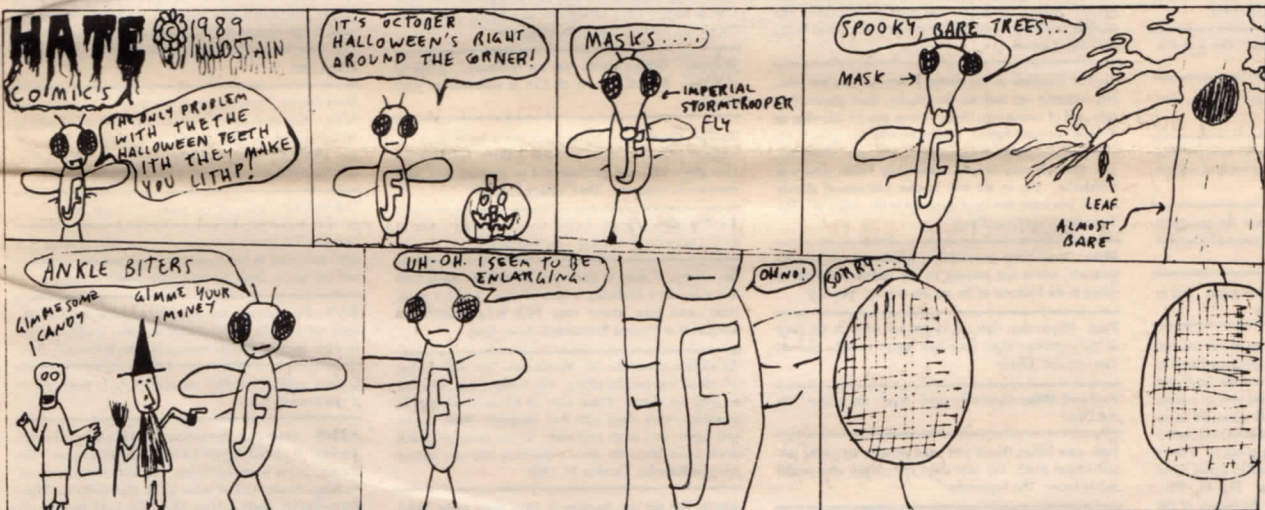

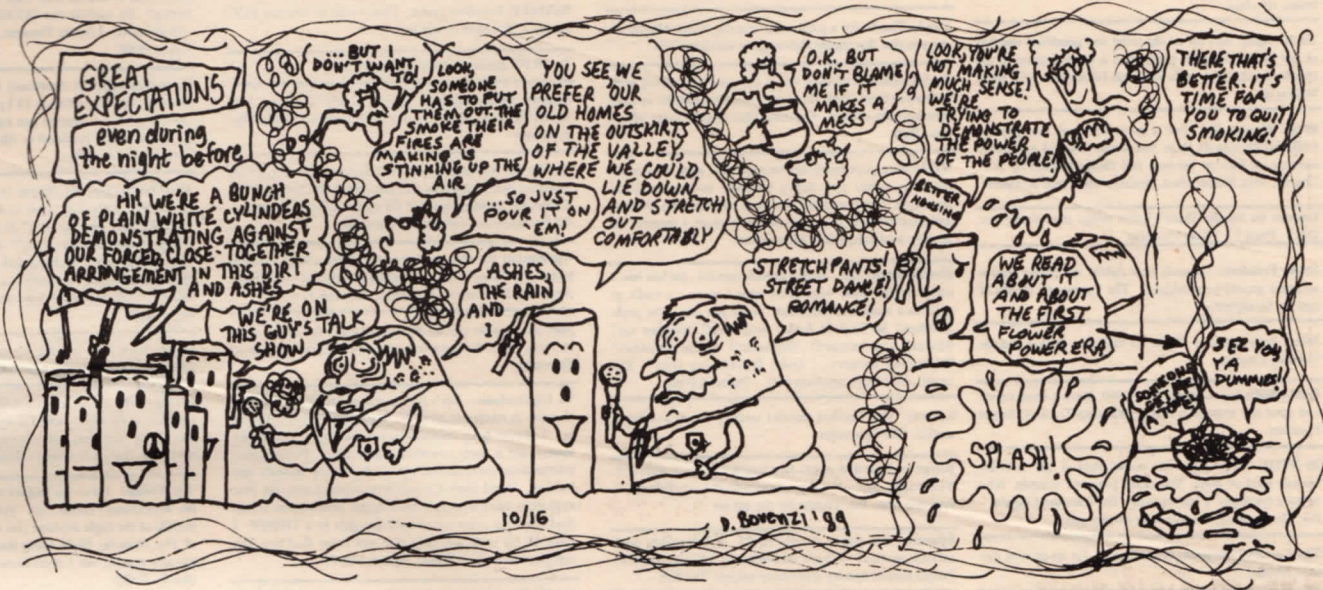

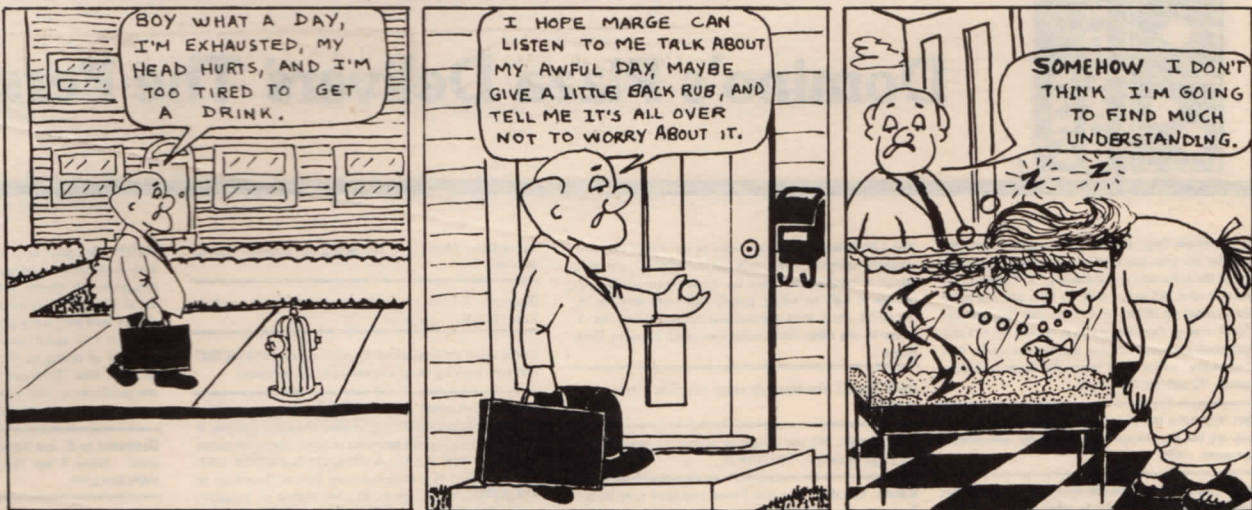

If you're interested, contact Tom Verre at box 6137 or leave a message at the Connector Office. C'mon! Have a little fun, will ya?

The Boss: Would you like to interview the prospects before you make a decision regarding current employees? The Typesetter

Paulie: Pleez be cheery... at least for my sake. You're cuter when you're smiling. Pep/mint Patty

To Schmoo: You're now in the same boat as me and you don't want me to be sad about it? The position I'm in is living hell. The Heart of a Romantic and the Soul of a Gentleman sit buried within me, too afraid ever to surface again. If a Lady ever does cross my path again, I'll never have the guts to offer all that I'm capable of... but there's no Ladies left, so why bother worrying about it? I don't know what's worse: the fact that Ladies don't exist anymore, or the death of a Gentleman. SCI-FI. PS Whatever happens, please don't forget the beauty of the night of the Lunar Eclipse...

Lady in Waiting: It looks as if someone is calling for you. The Typesetter

To NTDJ: That was a question we've all asked, but nice guys always finish last. Wenches will manipulate you with your deepest insecurities: Ladies (what's left of them) will be very polite, but still chase sparks in guys who will, in turn, abuse them. To be a Gentleman in the 20th Century means absolutely nothing to women of today. But I'll tell you this much (I doubt it will help but here goes) When you're sitting in the dust at the end of the Finish Line remember: We've all been there at one time or another. SCI-FI. PS Typesetter: Romance is something far different than getting laid (but that's MY opinion, a very rare one nowadays...)

Sci-Fi: Here's a last minute quote, since I've been soooooo busy lately. "Tropical the island breeze, all of nature wild & free, this is where I long to be.... The sun would set so high, ring through my ears and sting my eyes.... your spanish lullabye..." I long to be there, too... Schmoo

President Hogan: Why must this University always give the Karate Club a hard time? I don't know if you've heard of our problem but I know that a major chapter of my University Life is being cut out by the University's denial of our right to work out on the school grounds. Please, we beg for your interest in our plight. A Female Student's View

Stop scaring my roommate! -Prospective RA.

NTDJ: Why is it crash and burn time when guys make moves on their femal friends? It isn't always... There's nothing wrong with being friends before being in love, but remember, a girl, esp. at ULowell, has many male friends. Don't get offended if you are not the one she chooses to date. In most cases, it would be, to us, like kissing a brother! --A North Campus Major

You'd think I would have learned after the first explosion, but I went and did it again, with similar result. And now you want me to spill my guts to a THIRD? I think I'll sit back and let a nice girl come find me; I've suffered too many wounds... signed, SCI-FI

Sci-Fi: Yes, I know what it's like to be wounded because you were honest. But consider this: the wounds, no matter how deep they seem now, were not mortal. If you deceive others and/or are not honest with them, the wounds could very well be mortal when the truth is found out. The Typesetter

I know we told you this was for a freshman College Writing paper... we lied. However, you were all very helpful, especially Peter, who was wonderful. Oh, by the way, in case you weren't already aware, you have now been exposed to the antics of - The Thursday Night Gang Bang

Mike: Next Time you drink a whole quarter keg by yourself, you're not playing on my badminton team or riding in the backseat of the car I'm driving! Heather

Paul: Maybe next time we should just sleep on the floor so the comforter won't have two stories to fall ( and we won't either). Diane

Paul and Mike: How's the jaw? How's the pecker? Di and Dick

Paul and Mike: Would you mind clearing up whose jaw and whose dick? I'm sure there are people who would like to know. The Typesetter

Hey you turkey fans! There's going to be a turkey-of-an-event going on just around Thanksgiving time! A TURKEY BOWL!! More info coming up!!!

Hey Paul! You're doing a great job! Keep yp the good work! Just don't hesitate to ever ask anyone for help! People are not as unperceptive as you think. J.

Did I hear you say "TURKEY"? I think I did!!! What's that? A Turkey Bowl?? With Real Turkeys??? When? Where? Who?

Jayfa- You are a pacesetter of ua [sic] all! Didn't that Wild Thing in the room wake up your roommate up? Whatdaya mean he didn't even notice? Must have been made-up pretty bad. Excuse the lateness of this newsbrief (and brief is what you were if I heard the truth), but we've been awfully busy just keeping track of Emo and his wrestling practices. The Thursday Night Gang Bang

To NTDJ: Nice Guys will always finish last when they take advantage of friends. You should learn the difference between girl friends and friends. My women's intuition tells me that you just think the mood is turning to romance. -Drinker

For Sale: XT 10MHZ with Seagate 20 meg hard drive. Amber monitor, enhanced keyboard. 2 parallel ports. 1 serial, 1 game port. Owner upgrading only 1 year old. Extensive shareware software available. $750 or best offer. Call (508) 798-8148 Wed- Sun Evenings

Typesetter: Last week you made a reply to a personal saying that romance to most guys was "getting laid." You are either a woman who has had bad experiences with jerks or a guy who doesn't believe that "getting laid" is necessary [sic] to be romantic and sexually close. If you are the latter, I share your views totally. Sex is something to be shared by two people who care very deeply for one another. Congratulations on keeping your morals in these trying times. If you are the former, well, don't give up. There are respectable guys who want more out of a relationship than to jump in the sack with you. - Confused and Bitter

Confused and bitter: (your name is interesting...) You brought up an interesting item: morals. I believe that each person defines his/her own morals. For some, their morals may be defined by a church or some religious organization and for others (and I like to include myself in this category) morals are defined by a combination of respect of others and self. I'll leave you to contemplate this 'till some other time. The Typesetter

Carrie: "...and as he turned and saw the gates of hell behind him, he was thrilled to be free. Yet, at the same time, he was mournful for those who could never leave..." -John

NTDJ: You guys only scratched the surface last week with your personal ad about how poor women treat us nice guys. My theory is this: The bigger the bastard you are to woman, the more attached they get to you. I've always been nice to my girlfriends, especially my last tow, but here I sit again alone and confused. What is the purpose of trying to show a female that you can be romantic (See "Typesetter" personal), understanding, and compassionate as well as being a good friend to then if all you get in the end is the shaft? Confused and Bitter

Dedicated to E and Baton Tramp: Yes, I am the Muffin man. NOW I am the Butter Man. Da-de-da-da IMPERIAL!!!!

Hi Bubba! I love you!!!! How's Fred? He was pretty happy Monday night. He's a strange guy. I never do know quite what to expect from him. No l-ups lately. What's wrong? Be careful cuz ITZAHOT! congrats on your current move. I Never Thought... Happy 10!! Love, your honey! SMC

Steve Basketball in Penthouse #18: You are really nice looking. Next time I'm on 18 I plan on getting lost again. Do you mind if I come to you again for directions? Same for you if you're confused in 7th Heaven. Remember I'm "Just Lookin' for Mike"

Two Our Sweet [sic] Mates: 1) Fish, Guppie, What's the difference? 2) Exactly what is the "sweaty" and why is TAZ the only one doing it? 3) did he say "Two Hours, Every Muscle in your body"? 4) Fire IS sexual energy created that can't be channeled. (F=Se) 5) So, she gave HIM one ball when he needs two. 6) Whats-A-matta don't like it? 7) Off beat white boys are alright. 8) What's in the bag, bitch?

Murf: It's hard to "cut the rug" when you steal it from us. Bring us booze and your [sic] forgiven. The Eight

NTDJ: Why do nice girls finish last? The question plagues both sexes and I'd love to here the answer. Maybe the nice girls and nice guys should get together (if they ever find each other!) - Kiana

The TNGB: I was the subject of your phone # survey the Mysterious Finnish Girl. You can wake me up in the middle of the night anytime you want. If I saw a member of The Thursday Night Gang Bang on the street, I would identify myself, but I don't know what the hell you look like!!! -ENID

Enid: Is that a member of a of the Thursday Night Gang Band or the member of a member of The Thursday Night Gang g Bang? Let's straighten this matter out. The Typesetter, NoMuTT, and Dr. Strangelove

Webster: What's a sure cure for insomnia? going to H.V.W.C. So, tell me, are all Cj's as articulate as you? Oedipus

To The Typesetter: You're right that a lot of guys see romance as getting laid (probably NTDJ) but there are also guys who see getting laid as getting laid, and romance as romance. - The Cunning Linguist

The Cunning Linguist: (is that what you really wanted to say?) I've never denied that. The Typesetter

To Gerry: I want to thank you for all you did to help make my 21st birthday a special day. I had a great time... and how about that PEE WEE HERMAN silverware at Seasons Restaurant!! Love, Lynn

To all who nissed the Mt. Monadnock Trip: The hiking adventure was breathe taking. The weather was great and so were the sights. There were 26 ULowell students in attendance [sic] along with Prof Shapiro!! Well, maybe you might want to go next time. If you never go, you'll never know about the great experience that you missed this past Saturday, October 14, 1989

Above: But the real question is: How many came back? Dr. Strangelove

S- Thanks. You're really cool. We'd best have some more nights like last Friday!! Amazing, every step but the last one! Next time we'll try two or three flights maybe! Good evening, how many in your party this evening? Smoking or non? I can not wait until May and the establishment of the C.I.S.!! I know you're surprised, and yes you're probably gonna kill me, but I remember, "I wish I were a trinity..." -B

Hey Contagious Cute boxers! did I surprise you? Carefree

To Rude and Contagious: Next time, go before we leave! Carefree

H Boy: Stop chasing girls through the gym... You won't catch them. P.S. Always remember: You can't have three pieces of cake and enjoy them all!! KK

Computer Fabie: I'll see y ou from behind the counter again starting in the spring! The Boss

Tammy N., You gotta keep on movin' while driving in your ka and drinking a tonic on the Mass pike and not knowing what state you're in. Also, pick those schnoogers tokeevie out your passenger and don't forget to stay hullo to Nana in the parlah. Love, The Losers and The Buttheads. P.S. Don't piss yourself laughing because we typed this on your typewriter

Hey Paul: You better watch those Hugs... People are beginning to wonder. When and where is the honey moon? Write Back. The Hugger.

Interested in joining RA-RA? Talk to us!! The only requirement is that you live with an R.A. Send ys your name, address (dorm), box, and your RA's signature and you are an instant member!! This is an informal (and we stress INFORMAL) organization. You will receive an official RA-RA certificate of membership and once-a-month calendar of events. Please send information to: Billy (alias "B") box 1613 and Sandy (alias "S") Box 5680

Wishing a very happy birthday to Pia (pooled). Partice

Dearest NTDJ: I feel you are pitying yourself as well as the whole male race. For the most part the girls get the short end of the stick. Why don't you try and go for the girl who is interested in you as a person instead of always trying to aim for that unsustainable Goddess. Maybe then you can solve your little problem. And as The Typesetter said... getting laid is not romance. L"

Pia: A Happy Birthday to you. May it be filled with tubs of jello and whipped cream. NoMuTT

To My sis (aka BH): I'm really glad we are friends as well as sister's this year. It's much better this way. Good luck with the man sit... It will work out. G.L. with V-Ball!! Lil Lupus

Townies: Stage clean-up will be Sunday Oct. 22 at 12:00! EVERYONE in cast should be there!

Above: Thanks for telling your T.D. Love, Guess Who?

Schmoo: The lyrics you sent to Rainbow Warrior are, I believe, part of a Pink Floyd The Wall, a song in the movie but not on the record. As for those sent to Sci-Fi... that was too easy. Say Deli, aka Tilonas's Bane.

Sci-Fi: We are two of a kind. We both create heroic realms to live in. The only difference is that you write yours down. With admiration, Crusher

Matchstyk: Heres [sic] one for you: /The word weighs on my shoulders/ but what am I to do? /You sometimes drive me crazy But I worry about you/ I know it makes no difference/ to what you're going through/ But I see the tip of the iceberg - And I worry about you. Whitmane

Hi Al! -Patty

Rose: I am sorry that I must depart from you this weekend. Duty calls. I've enjoyed our moments alone. You'll always be in my mind and heart. Dove

Berk: I'm in your corner if you need the help. -Quik Kick

Davion: Kurita and I are going to kick you ass from here to Beta Cygnus. Marik

AnnMarie (cluemaster): Thanks for the favor: we'll find out if it worked Friday. I owe you one. Doughboy

Above: Did you ... Nah, I couldn't say that. The Typesetter

Hiram (Tony): The only reason we put the Captain Crunch is your bed is to keep out the soggies. The 2nd Floor

Above: What was the Captain Crunching? The Typesetter

To The Man From Paradise and the two Kathys: What the hell happened? The rest of us are dying to know! Curious personal readers Everywhere!!

Pluto: You know who you are. I have found that the more things change, the more they do stay the same - but time does not necessarily heal all wounds. You Know Who I Am.

Steve Doyle: Thank you for noticing how fine we've been lately. Why don't you show your face, instead of writing on our memo boards. We'd like to see how "fine" you are. We're the 17th floor girls, please give us a call or stop by if you are interested. The 17th Floor

Colorguard - Saying of the week - F*** you, Scott

Dooder: On a scale dimensions I am scoring 3 out of 5. I don't have time to finish my homework and the starship to sail into space. But I did finish your book! Crusher

RA'S Do you think that your roommate is special? We think so!!! Write to Bill (1613) or Sandy (5680) and tell us why. Brag about your roommate; they'll love it!! -B.S.

Is there really a Fox Hall vacuum cleaner? Write SOON if you know!! -B.S.

APICS (American Production and Inventory Control Society) Is sponsoring [sic] a lecture by Phil Hubis. The lecture is on manufacturing and the importance of working closely with all other facets of a business. Multi Purposeroom, North Library, Wendsday [sic], October 25, 1989 3:30

Hey Paul! When are we going to the movies? Patty

Hey Roomie: (Breathe) In with the good... Out with the bad. Road trip was awesome. Finally got my chocolate eyes... where do we go next? YFR

Debbie, Excuse me, but would you like to have a seat on this fan? You know, your not an easy person to find. Danny (Box #464_hint, hint)

Isaac: Have you gotten laid yet? Pati

To Curious, Rude and Contagious: Watch out for wild dogs lurking in the woods!!

Holly Sweat Pants Batman, that "Jumpin'" Guy looks just like Kevin Sca!!

What is Beaton??

Typesetter: "...and there are but few Connectories here in the office..."?? You mean orifice, don't you? As to your reply to NTDJ, I wouldn't restrict "romance" to "getting laid" hugs are nice, too, as are just holding hands and going for walks. And regarding the personal form you, NoMuTT, and T2, I do remember the "Reader, the Junior, and that, umm, "Devastating Ink," and I wonder where they went. Especially Junior. I'm not sure why, I just miss seeing 'Junior, the Green-Eyed whatshername, and a few others whom I can't remember the names of off the top of my head. But let's not mourn the past too much: all things must change. Even you and I. Deli

Deli (aka Freshman Geek): Yes, I do remember you and your thing for Junior. I am happy to inform you that Junior is teaching math to little shits in Southwick. Should we upgrade you to the Junior Geek? The Typesetter and T2

Congratulations to all ULowell Crew team. Hurrah and Thank God we can work together as a team to win. One Team Player

To All Respondants: I am heartened by your many responses to my last week's lamentation. However, I must raise my voice to shout, with passion, that getting laid is far from my mind when I speak of romance. To clear the situation, I am a somewhat lonely guy who has the misfortune of liking a female friend. I don't want to take advantage of her, I just want a chance to romance her. Is that a crime? NTDJ P.S. My idea of romance would be a snowy day, a fireplace and hot chocolate to share

NTDJ: We find it heartening that your personal has evoked such a positive response. The Management
